Welcome from the President

Dear ICIS Attendees,

Welcome to the 23rd meeting of the International Congress on Infant Studies in Ottawa, the picturesque capital of Canada. All of us have a special reason to celebrate this biennial, and I am sure that every one of you is as excited to be here as I am. It has been 4 years since we were together in person to share our research, and the enthusiasm of our membership for this meeting has been nothing short of inspiring. Over 750 members are here to showcase their science, learn from one another, network, and hopefully enjoy the history, architecture, and culture of this beautiful city.

We have an excellent line-up of speakers in the invited program, and an equally superb submitted program of symposia, paper sessions, and posters, reflecting the rich diversity of theories, methods, and topics in infancy research. The depth and breadth of the ICIS program is due to the countless hours and creative thinking of Program co-chairs Amy Needham, Jessica Sommerville, and Melissa Libertus, and the generous dedication of panel review chairs and reviewers who evaluated hundreds of submissions to arrive at a set of rich and varied presentations and posters. As you attend talks and posters, you will notice an emphasis on developmental cascades—the idea that learning and development are products of change across multiple systems, at multiple levels, and at multiple time scales. Infancy in particular is an unparalleled time in development: Rapid changes in brain and body usher in new skills and opportunities nearly every day, making the conference theme of developmental cascades particularly apt.

Of course, pulling together a conference is much more than curating science. ICIS XXIII would not be possible without the support of Marischal De Armond and his team at Podium Conference Specialists—especially Amanda Jay and Sarah-Kate Burke—who handled every detail, big and small, from securing the venue and arranging receptions to making sure the conference app was user friendly. Sam Putnam and Martha Arterberry oversaw undergraduate travel awards, and once more pulled together an outstanding program of events for the newest members of our society. And members of the ICIS board identified outstanding graduate students for travel awards to the conference. Be sure to welcome and take time to talk with the next generation of researchers of infancy!

As you participate in ICIS XXIII, I hope that you partake of all the excitement that the conference and venue in Ottawa have to offer. I recall years ago, as President Elect, I was immediately taken by the beauty of Ottawa, loved the intimacy of the Westin conference hotel, and was eager for us to be together in a smaller conference hotel rather than a large conference center. I hope you enjoy the comfortable guest rooms, the proximity to museums and restaurants, and opportunity to take walks along the riverbank (maybe even a boat tour!). Be sure to attend the presidential reception on Friday night and join all of us in celebrating the gift of being together once again.

Best,

Catherine Tamis-LeMonda

Catherine Tamis-LeMonda

Welcome from the Program Chairs

We welcome you to the 23rd meeting of ICIS! We are meeting up in Ottawa, the capital city of Canada. We look forward to experiencing many of the things that Ottawa is known for, including the Ottawa River that separates Ontario and Quebec, Parliament Hill (three beautiful Gothic Revival-style buildings that house many Canadian government activities), the National Gallery of Canada (home to one of the finest collections of Indigenous and Canadian art in the world), and Byward Market (the oldest farmer's market in Canada). We hope you take advantage of the special summer events that Ottawa has to offer over the conference (the Shakespeare Festival and Blues Fest), sample food from across the world in this amazing multi-cultural city, and enjoy the surrounding natural beauty (including Gatineau Park, a 15-minute drive away).

We are so excited to be getting together in person with many of our ICIS colleagues for the first time in 4 years! We have all been through a lot of difficult things over the past few years and we hope that this meeting will allow us to share with one another the fruits of our hard labor. We may discover that others faced similar obstacles and found solutions that can help us; we may share new methods and tools that can move our field forward; and we may realize that a sudden change from status quo has led to new and unexpected discoveries. While we are celebrating this return to an aspect of academic life that many of us truly love, we can all be respectful and careful to observe the different levels of comfort that different members of our community have with being physically close to others. Please remember that you cannot tell just by looking whether someone has a reason to be extra cautious about protecting themselves. Thank you!

As you may recall, our invited program is focused on the theme of Developmental Cascades. In recent years, researchers have advanced an understanding of intersections among behaviors, abilities, and processes at multiple levels of analysis (biological, neural, behavioral, environmental, cultural), across different domains (motor, cognitive, language, social, emotional, etc.), and across time (from prenatal development through early childhood). Such Developmental Cascades continue to elucidate previously unsuspected causal links and co-dependencies among seemingly disparate processes. By highlighting current research on Developmental Cascades, we aim to spark new ideas, invigorate researchers' approaches to their work, and advance fresh perspectives on the science of infancy.

We hope that this meeting offers a collection of exciting presentations that will enrich your thinking about your own research. We also hope this conference will help you connect with old and new colleagues and spark new ideas. Infants represent the future, and advances in the science of infancy are vital to creating a world in which all infants thrive in supportive contexts. Let's work together to make this world a better place for generations of infants to come!
